A Swamp haze lifts...

Humans as a battery

Of the machine

There is no creator

But those that maintain it are the owners

The machine's purpose is to generate money

These idiots decided the best powersource is human trauma

Leeched by psychological protrusions

Workers subconsciously use trauma as a motivator

This has been ingrained through direct subliminal messaging in the form of media

Projecting the message that trauma brings power

Power brings trauma

There are no moral implications around making money

However, human trauma is debilitating if left without healing

Love is an unlimited energy source *

These retards made the perfect money making machine

And put the batteries in upside down.

Is Love an Unlimited Energy?

“Energy” Is the “fuel” of the “capitalist machine”

Trauma and trauma avoidance play a major role in the capitalist cycles.

Capitalism is too loose of a concept, in the sense that it employs too many associations and so is restrictive when trying to focus on the “machine”. This is a powerful tactic employed by the “financiers”; that which cannot be defined cannot be changed.

The machine is incomprehensibly complex and to a degree where, when trying to pinpoint why it is dysfunctional, it sends the imager down 20 separate neural pathways so left hemisphere is out in Aphasia land counting [], whereas right hemisphere is half way to Timbuktu trying to attach bicycle helmets to camel's testicles!

These “philanthropists” don’t know whether it’s better to die or live. They don’t value life.

Primarily, the source of human survival has been community, love - the interconnected web of the human system, in some way, branching out to keep as many as possible afloat.

What is love?

Baby don't hurt me don't rape and eat that baby.

Love is memory

A love fades because memory fades

To maintain love create lovely memories

Reality is how you perceive it and a mind deprived of love sees life as a static and inoperable canvas, whereas a mind filled with memories of fun summers, caring families, and clear futures sees life as an infinite vortex of experience and possibilities.

Most lie between these two states.

Love today has been co-opted by the “machine” and become part of its aggressive confusingness.

Love is not eternal bliss, or carefree ambivalence; or saviour from pain or suffering or your own incompetence.

Love is not worth defining

Love is all

Love is survival

To get gnostic up in here:

The Archonic¹ forces are able to be overcome.

It may seem like fruitless and fantastical work - and many times impossible.

Love will tear “us” apart.

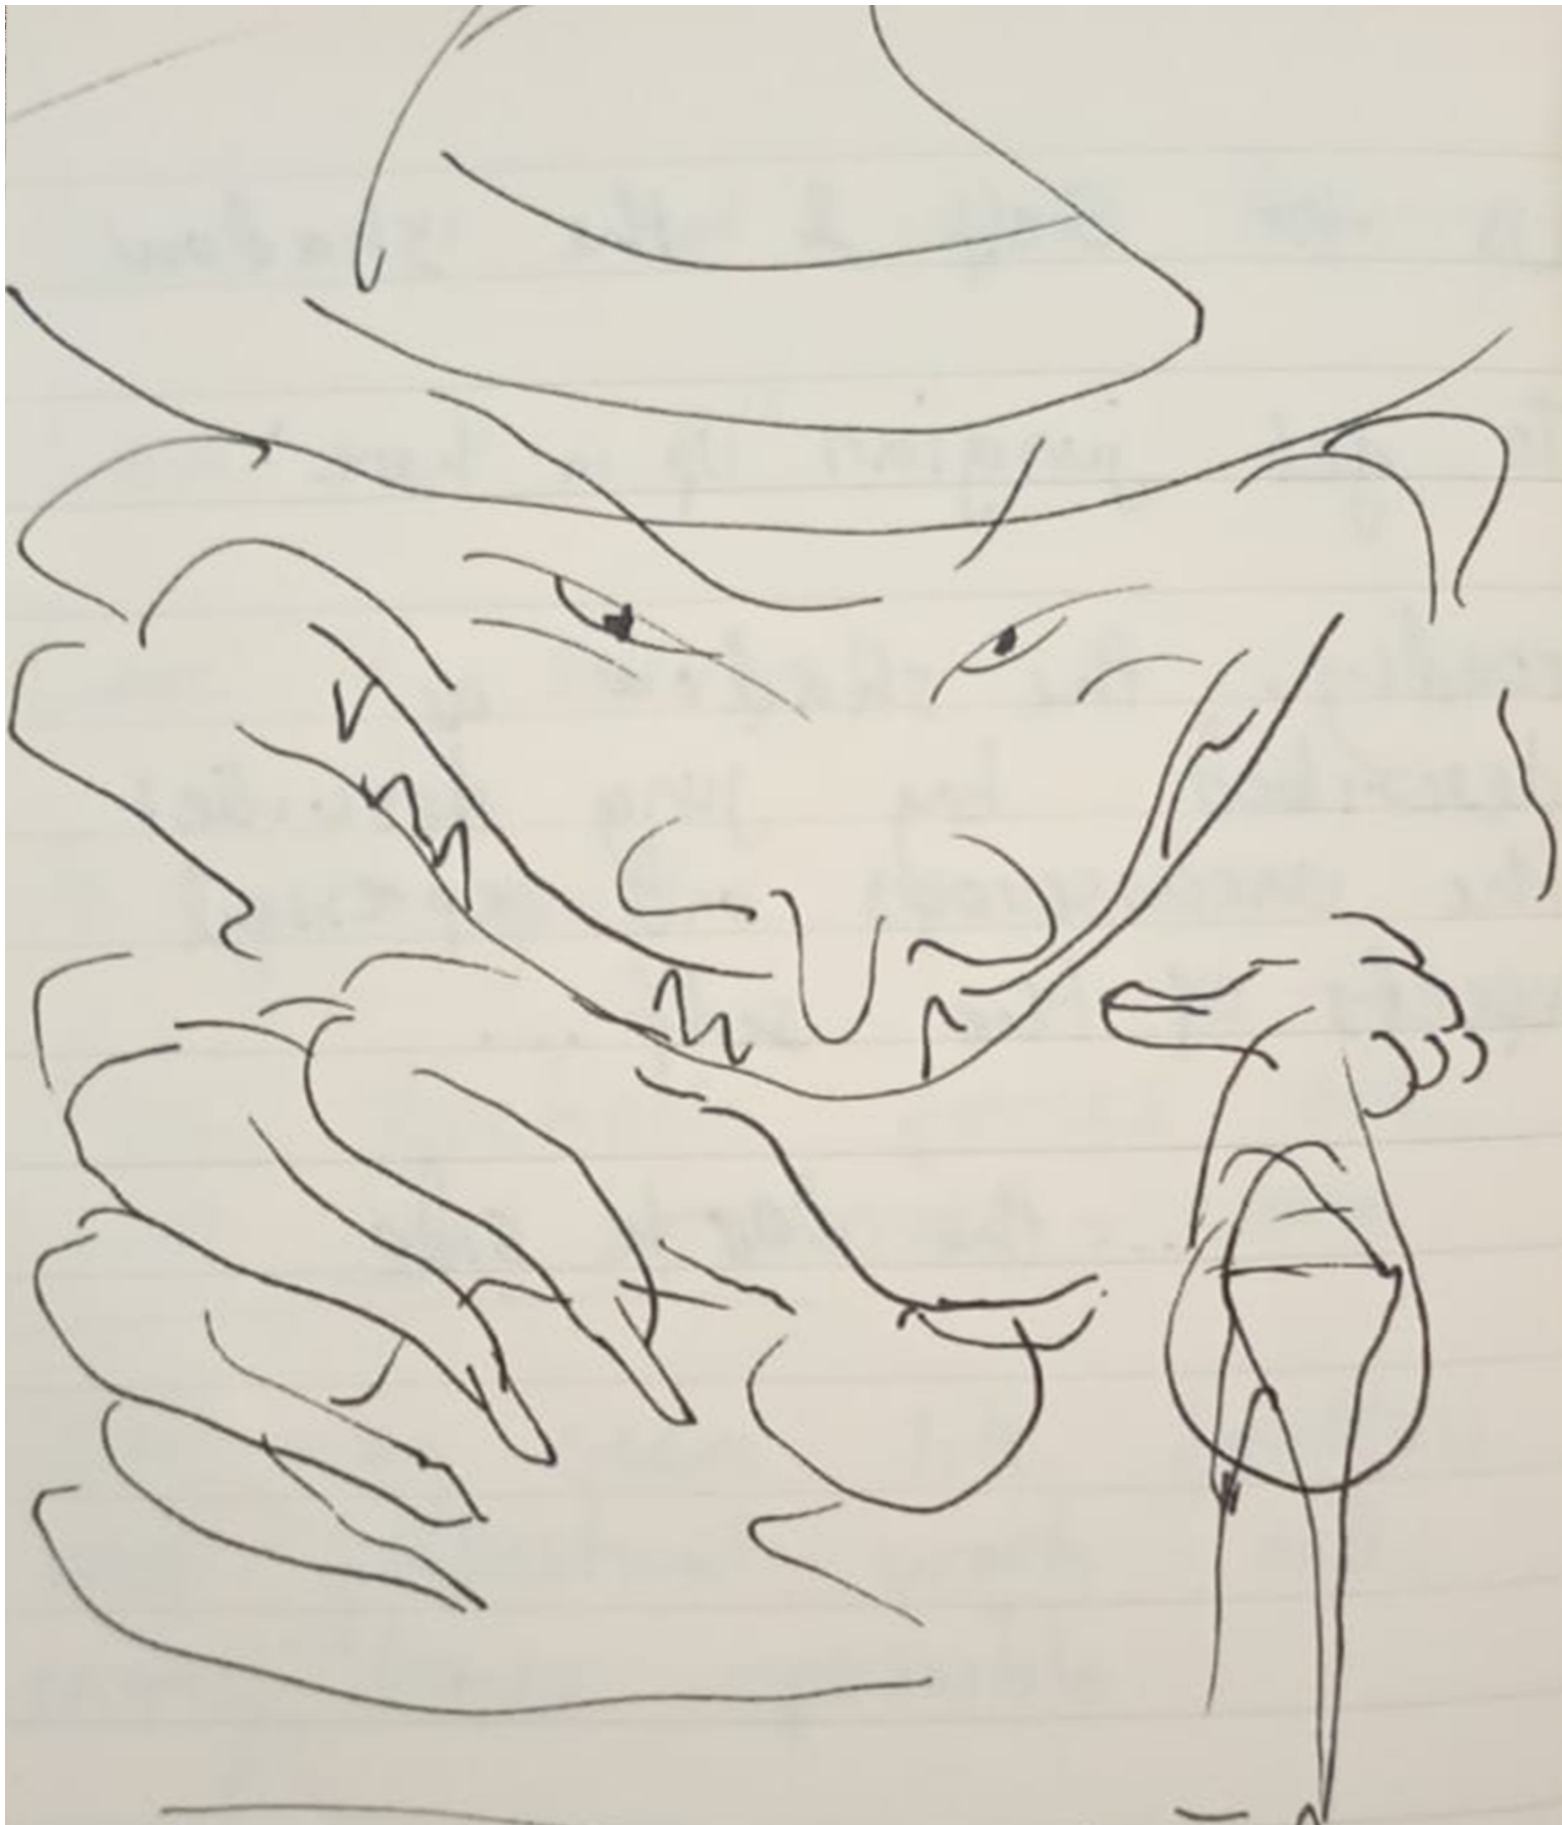

Us -> self & the shadow

¹ Archonic - relating to Archons of Gnostic mythology: The beings which keep human souls imprisoned in the material world. Archonic in this sense relates to the imprisoning forces of self doubt and poor self image, which is arguably what the Archons themselves are representative of.

To get jungian up in here:

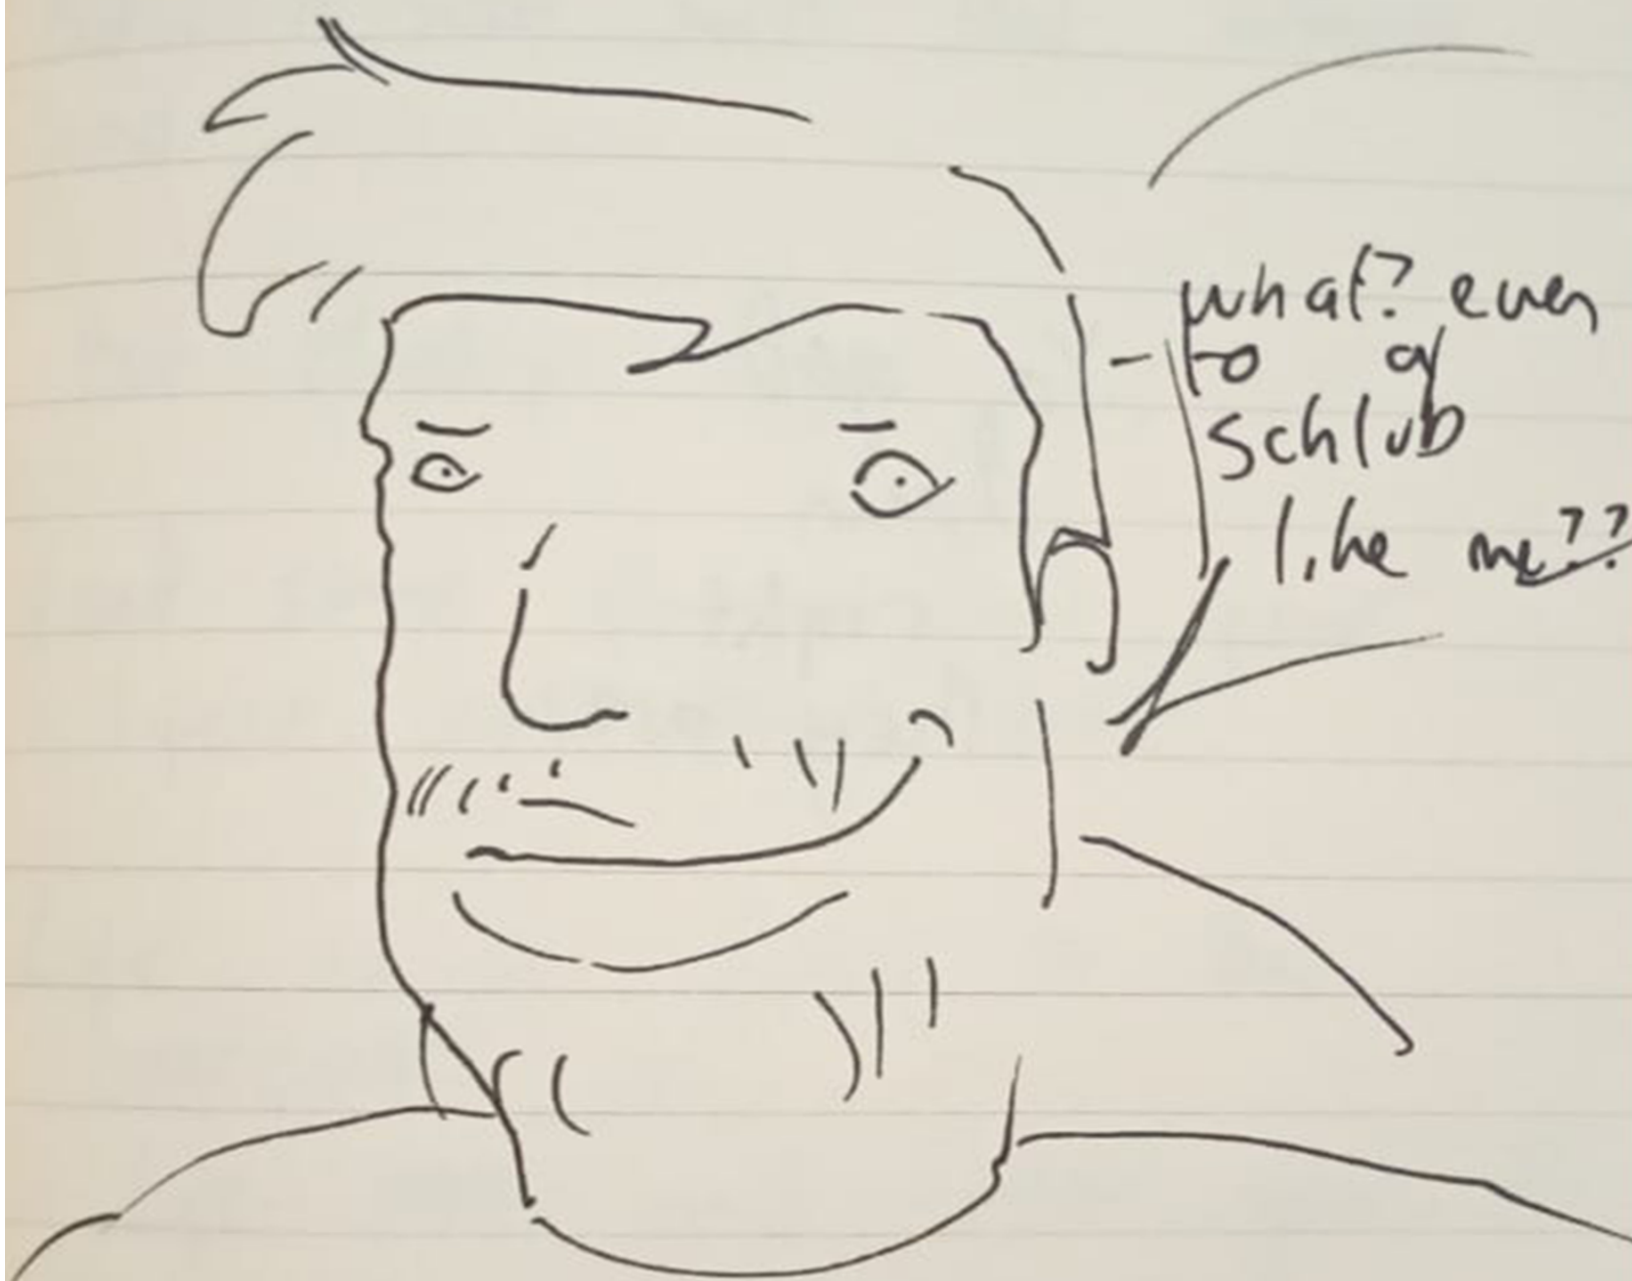

Broadly the shadow is described by jung as the unconscious and repressed aspects of the self...

...the dark side

What evil secrets do these dark forces hide?

... They're beatable :)

Ya god

damn

Right

They are

But.. it will suck the whole time

But that's life

Read some Primo Levi your life's not that bad.

Life is a bitch to be overcome, or: life sucks and then you die.

BUT!

It can be made to suck less

The purpose of life is to make it as good as possible,

To live is to work

As an eden-esque utopia is materially impossible - we must work to survive.

The only change I propose is to allow people to live happily.

This will marginally slow the rate at which expansion is possible

Halt!

Do you not see the turning of the stars?

Do you not see that through pain you have accelerated time?

Just get on with it, just toughen up, stop being such a little bitch...

Such yammers the maddened mind.

EXISTENCE is within reach.

Ease and mother yourself.

Cradle thine ghostly self into calm.

Work to live

Life is good

But to parse what makes it so takes effort to seek.

Effort which is otherwise displaced within a machine of desire and pain.

And so we are stuck...

Only once the majesty of the heavens is glimpsed will the grasp of self inflicted terror yield, into a hand which heartily slaps a back and eases into a hanging palm.

Ohhhhhh... hahaha !

All of this

Is illusory

A veil of greed and power, bred from negligence and suffering.

The energy of pain has taken many to high places.

BUT the energy of pain CANNOT be sustained.

Nor does it have to be.

A vague memory of a quote follows:

The earth will be drowned in a blanket of agony and fire.

This fire will seem to burn eternally, causing all those born unto it everlasting pain.

But a light

The water of love will embrace all who seek it and put out the fire of pain.

Love is a bad word to use, however.

Remember: love is not worth defining; lessons from sigil magick.

Language is a virus, a most devious Bill² once said.

It infects the mind and directs thought - not through moments of elegance, reflecting that of the God-consciousness, but of human language.

Vile - stuttering - and rambling.

To think non-verbally is to be free of conditioning.

Sigils³ are ways of expressing ideas without words, look at a symbol and be reminded of an idea or concept, without the splintering of thought that language can cause, as it is reflective of free-form/spiraling/conditioned conversation.

² William Burroughs

³ The essential information of sigil magick is the writing of Austin Osman Spare

To Humour Money:

Presently, the rate of life is reflective of the rate of economic growth.

To live 'happily' we must live in 'harmony' with nature/existence.

I mean harmony in a directly musical sense - the elements of a choral texture must resonate with each other in a way which is pleasant only for the reason of being able to listen without strain / enjoy the listening experience. Passing dissonance is good when used to create tension, embedding story and movement to a piece.

To live in a world of dissonance is eerily similar to torture methods.

Economic growth is still possible, but would be slower.

BUT due to life being more enjoyable there would be decreased urgency to quell pain through one's vice, money for example.

If you need less money to feel good - maybe it would be better spent on others who would benefit from it.

Universal basic income for 18-25 year olds

The only work is growing food and maintaining health and infrastructure -> businesses can obviously exist and there should be some degree of economic freedom but the main focus should be on keeping everyone fed, sheltered, and in good mental and physical health.

LET THE PEASANTS TEND THE LAND

If the feudalists want so badly to return, then let the workers work only for necessary purposes.

Let the workers live to survive - directly.

Let them grow their crops and milk their cows and mother their land.

With an almost overwhelming work force there could be a decreased work week, allowing people to still interface with the preexisting economic system, based around goods, and art.

Money is quite clearly the problem, it is plain to see that those enveloped by the fire of pain ('Financiers') use it as an instrument of extinguishing.

To try to put out a fire by layering mounds of paper atop is idiotic on all fronts.

To base a society around a non material, “miraculous”, system - which has ONLY been sustained by 'Financiers' who desperately try to cure their pain through such a system does not make for a particularly harmonious system in which to exist - is stupid.

If society must be based around a core system, then why not base it around a system which is necessary.

Extremist Vegetarianism

To propose a very undeveloped concept: why not base society around the cultivation and distribution of crops and vegetables?

All need food to survive, in a world which is hellbent on abuse and murder I feel it is morally obligatory to remove livestock from this equation.

I highly recommend Emma Hakansson's 'Sub-Human' as an exploration of the abuse of animals.

I am not vegan or vegetarian, and do not directly feel that it is immoral to farm and consume animals at a small scale level. Living in the supermarket society I have not much choice of meat sources to a degree I can financially afford.

Disclaimer out of the way, and to return to a previous point:

Let the peasants tend the land.

If society was based purely around the production of food, it would almost completely be able to subvert the need for money.

The only other work I can conceive that is absolutely necessary for survival would be the maintenance of domiciles as well as any infrastructure. Would it be possible to keep sewage systems without money?

Would there be needs for cars and heavy vehicles? If only to transport large quantities of produce.

Can there be an alternate fuel source for these vehicles?

Can they be powered directly from solar or wind or electrostatic atmospheric energy?

In what ways can we deconstruct our needs in order to rebuild the structure in which we live?

This train of thought gets into the territory of Chaos Magick: mental magic.

I highly recommend Condensed Chaos: An Introduction to Chaos Magick by Peter J Carroll .

Chaos magick is not witchcraft or demonology, don't worry, it is more psychology and philosophy.

The whole premise is essentially: do your best and have fun doing it.

Here we sit.

At the foot of an insurmountable mountain.

We are told, directly, with evidence, that the structure in which we live is directly orchestrated by billionaire pedophiles, purely for the purpose that they can commit vile atrocities like the rape and cannibalism of children and babies and get away with it completely.

The only thing that is sensible to do is to completely deconstruct and rebuild.

But when trapped in a machine that overfeeds us, like a pig, with misery; so that we can be slaughtered and bled dry for our blood to be burned as fuel to turn the turbines of a uber-satanic money generator; it seems we are in an inescapable position.

To proceed you must change everything, starting with anything.

And prepare for gruelling spiritual, mental, and physical work.

The only other option is inaction. From which things can and will only get worse.

Help and be helped by others.

How can you live outside of money?

Gnosis: Knowledge of the divine through direct experience.

The only way to transmute mind into matter is through action.

Only through directly experiencing can you know: why / how / what / who / where / when.

Anything else is fantasy

In a world blinded by fantasy and illusion it is important to only rely on physical truth.

Do not trust, know. Prove and be proven wrong.

Continually deconstruct and reconstruct - equilibrium is always reached unless directly prevented by an external modifier.

Remove the leeching powers of the 'Financiers'.

To live statically is to play perfectly into the 'Financiers' models. A stationary entity is easier to control than one in an almost superpositional state.

Life With Love as an Energy Source

Not worth defining love is everything love your neighbour
let him rim you blah blah blah

The closest to utopia we can get is a world where people are motivated by the idea of utopia. Everyone living with purpose. The purpose of maintaining the utopia, in which everyone has purpose.

An infinite feedback loop of utopian idealism.

I believe the world can be better because it is already good

The inverse is how the 'Financiers' project the world as evil and irredeemable. The world sucks and so it can only get worse.

Love is memory

Memory is the future.

When thinking about the past you also think about the future.

Your expectations of life are built upon your lived experiences, your own personal Gnosis.

I know women are evil and uncaring because my mother was emotionally abusive and my girlfriend in high school didn't care about me.

I know women are almost divine beings of kindness and motivation because my ex treated me with such immense kindness and love and the women I am friends with are the most motivated and incorruptible people that walk the planet.

It is possible to reach both poles of the spectrum of Gnosis of any given topic.

Superposition of anything is possible.

But when both opposites are not only possible, but true, then what is truth?

Reality is how you perceive it. Truth is what you accept it to be.

To accept an easy truth is to forgo the possibility of another truth.

What is the best truth?

Surely, the best truth is the truth when all within it know that the truth in which they live serves them.

A truth that when thinking about does not induce feelings of suicide.

The truth presently is that the structure in which we live is directly orchestrated by billionaire pedophiles, purely for the purpose that they can commit vile atrocities like the rape and cannibalism of children and babies and get away with it completely.

How can we traverse the mountain to reach the summit?

This is a question that can only be answered once we reach such an answer.

Through physical action.

Through gnosis.

Through support and love of one another,
unconditionally.

Unconditionally - without condition. ONLY support and love of another. If conditions arise that makes this difficult or impossible a solution MUST be found.

If love becomes conditional, the conditions that need to be met for love to exist creates a black hole of morality. How far will you go to reach love?

Will you kill?

Will you isolate?

Will you become self sufficient?

Will you hoard wealth?

Will you rape and eat babies?

Will you commit unspeakable acts?

Love MUST be unconditional,

There cannot be any other way

A world that has no 'Hitler' is a world that cares about 'Hitler'.

A world that sees struggle and helps.

Unconditionally.

To make a mistake is human, to neglect is evil.

What the world needs is moral courage.

What civilization is, is 6 billion people trying to make themselves happy by standing on each other's shoulders and kicking each other's teeth in. It's not a pleasant situation. And yet you can stand back and look at this planet and see that we have the money, the power, the medical understanding, the scientific knowhow, the love and the community to produce a kind of human paradise. But we are led by the least among us, the least intelligent, the least noble, the least visionary. We are led by the least among us. and we do not fight back against the dehumanizing values that are handed down as control icons. Uh this is something I mean I don't really want to get off on this tear because it's a lecture in itself but culture is not your friend.
